

information
and privacy commission
new south wales

IPC Code of Conduct

Updated October 2023

Who is this information for?	This document is for IPC NSW Staff.
Why is this information important to them?	This Code sets out the minimum standards of conduct expected and applies to all aspects of the IPC’s employment, including the workplace environment and workplace activities, and provides staff with an ethical framework for their decisions, actions and behaviour.

Contents

CEO Message	3
Introduction	5
1. Comply with the law, policies and any lawful direction.....	7
2. Report to Parliament and act in an independent, apolitical manner consistent with relevant legislation.....	7
3. Provide timely, accurate and impartial service which reflects our values	9
4. Treat everyone with respect, courtesy and fairness.....	9
5. Provide quality customer service and assistance	9
6. Respect the privacy of individuals and maintain appropriate confidentiality of information.....	10
7. Act with honesty, ethically and with integrity	11
8. Identify and actively manage conflicts of interest.....	11
9. Decline gifts or benefits which affect or may be seen to affect impartiality	12
10. Report instances of corruption, serious and substantial waste, or maladministration.....	13
11. Ensure public resources are used in a proper manner	13
12. Exercise diligence, care and attention in performing official duties (such as procurement, decision making and dealing with lobbyists) and look for ways to improve performance	14
13. Guide to ethical decision-making.....	14
14. Lobbying	14
15. Breaches & Disciplinary Process.....	15
16. References.....	15
Attachment 1: Disclosure of conflicts of interest	18

CEO Message

The Information and Privacy Commission NSW (IPC) is an independent statutory authority with the purpose of regulating and championing information access and privacy rights for the people of NSW. Our vision is for the people of NSW to be confident that their access to information and privacy rights are upheld and protected.

As a member of the IPC, you contribute to the valuable work of promoting and protecting information access and privacy rights and ensuring individuals can have agency decisions independently reviewed, and that agencies and individuals can access information, guidance and training.

The Code of Conduct (the Code) has been developed and is regularly updated to operate as the foundation to the way we work at the IPC and takes into account the IPC Values:

- Accountable
- Service focussed
- Proactive
- Independent
- Integrity
- Trust.

These core values were developed in line with the Government Sector Core Values.

The NSW Independent Commission Against Corruption (ICAC) has identified a number of additional risks arising from the impact of the pandemic on the way public sector functions are performed in NSW, in particular:

- the fraud and corruption risks that arise during periods of disruption and economic downturn
- measures that may assist in protecting government funds.

The ICAC observed that:

...the routine practice of managing staff in an office environment becomes challenging when many members of staff are working remotely. Further complications may arise if a significant proportion of public officials take leave because they are sick or caring for a friend or family member.

The ICAC suggests that agencies remind all staff about their obligations, and that managers in particular be reminded of the importance of setting the right ethical tone for their staff.

Protecting the reputation of the IPC is vital to ensure our credibility and to maintain public trust in us as an independent regulator. This Code, supported by training, robust procedures and governance as well as Executive leadership is critical to delivering on our legislative responsibilities.

By following the IPC Values and this Code, we can work together to continually develop our culture of commitment to the people of NSW, maintain our high level of professionalism and service and uphold the information access and privacy rights of the NSW community.

If you have any questions about this Code or related issues, please speak to your manager or any member of our Executive team.

Elizabeth Tydd

IPC CEO, Information Commissioner
NSW Open Data Advocate

June 2023

Introduction

The IPC Code of Conduct is a guide to ethical workplace behaviour for all its employees. The Code of Conduct is based on and adheres to the Public Service Commission's Code of Ethics and Conduct for NSW Government Sector Employees. In accordance with the 2022 Public Service Commissioner's Direction staff will sign a declaration (Attachment 2) that they have read, understood and comply with the IPC's Code of Conduct.

This Code sets out the minimum standards of conduct expected and applies to all aspects of our employment, including the workplace environment and workplace activities, and provides all of us with an ethical framework for our decisions, actions and behaviour. The Code establishes the standards of employee conduct required by the IPC and outlines the responsibilities of employees and managers to achieve a workplace where appropriate ethical standards are maintained.

It also outlines the behaviour expected from all IPC employees and forms part of the conditions of employment. Abiding by the Code is a condition of employment for all staff of the IPC.

Employees who are found to be in breach of the Code may be subject to disciplinary action.

Core responsibilities of all staff

All employees of the IPC are expected to:

- comply with the law, policies and any lawful direction
- act in an independent, apolitical manner consistent with relevant legislation and government policies
- provide timely, accurate and impartial service which reflects our values
- treat everyone with respect, courtesy and fairness
- provide quality customer service and assistance
- respect the privacy of individuals and maintain appropriate confidentiality of information
- act honestly, ethically and with integrity
- identify and actively manage conflicts of interest
- decline gifts or benefits which affect or may be seen to affect impartiality
- report instances of fraud corruption, serious and substantial waste, or maladministration
- ensure public resources are used in a proper manner
- exercise diligence, care and attention in performing official duties (such as procurement, decision-making, management and supervision, and dealing with lobbyists) and look for ways to improve performance.

Additional responsibilities of senior staff

In addition to the above responsibilities, all managers and SEB 1 and above level employees must also:

- model ethical, efficient and safe work practices required of all public sector employees
- champion the implementation of the IPC's Values
- recognise and celebrate employee and team conduct that exemplifies these values
- be open, honest, respectful and comprehensive in their communication with all employees, including about the Code, together with broader standards of conduct and behaviour in the workplace

- ensure our workplace culture, practices and systems (including recruitment and promotion) are consistent with the ethical values
- ensure equity in employment and a workplace free from discrimination, harassment and bullying
- support the right of employees to raise workplace concerns, grievance complaints or allegations of discrimination, harassment and workplace bullying through internal and external processes
- provide employees who report to them with information about the objectives and duties of their position
- allocate work fairly and ensure that employees have the resources and support required to do their job
- act promptly and with due process to prevent and address any breaches of this Code.
- In addition to the above responsibilities, the Chief Executive/Commissioners have responsibilities to:
 - ensure the general conduct and management of the functions and activities of the IPC are in accord with the IPC Values Framework
 - oversee the implementation of these values and make improvements to systems, processes and culture where necessary
 - fulfil the obligations of the Independent Commission Against Corruption Act 1988 (section 11) and report a complaint about a matter that concerns, or may concern, corrupt conduct.

The IPC Values Framework

The IPC's Values Framework is consistent with the values of integrity, trust, service and accountability detailed in Part 2 of the Government Sector Employment Act \(NSW\) 2013 \(GSE Act\) which established an ethical framework for a merit-based, apolitical and professional government sector.

The IPC's Values are:

- Accountable
- Service focussed
- Proactive
- Independent
- Integrity
- Trust.

IPC staff are expected to conduct themselves consistent with the framework and should seek advice from their manager or appropriate senior colleague if they are unsure about how to implement these values in their role.

Definitions

Customer means any user, client or customer of the IPC's services.

Employee means every staff member in the IPC and every person engaged to provide the IPC with services, information or advice. More specifically, the Code applies to all employees including senior executives, permanent employees, temporary employees, casuals, trainees, ministerial staff, contractors, non-judicial statutory appointments and any member of the public sector service as defined in section 3 of the GSE Act.

Workplace means any place at which an employee or workplace participant works or otherwise attends in connection with carrying out duties as an employee or workplace participant. It also applies wherever you are working – from home, in another office, in the field – or how you are working – on the phone, on Skype, using Teams or using digital tools to communicate with colleagues or customers.

1. Comply with the law, policies and any lawful direction

Employees must comply with all legislative, industrial and administrative requirements and any lawful direction made by a person with the authority to give such a direction.

Employees are to comply with relevant laws, policies and procedures and to know and understand the law applicable to the performance of their duties. To facilitate compliance, the IPC's senior employees will ensure that:

- all employees are kept fully informed about the key legal requirements relevant to their work
- employees are made aware of the potential repercussions of non-compliance with legal requirements that apply to them
- appropriate recordkeeping systems and practices which capture evidence of compliance and non-compliance are in place. These should be in accordance with the State Records Act 1998.

2. Report to Parliament and act in an independent, apolitical manner consistent with relevant legislation

The IPC is an independent statutory authority that administers NSW legislation dealing with access to information and privacy. The IPC is recognised as a separate agency under Schedule 1 of the GSE Act. The NSW Parliamentary Committee on the Office of the Ombudsman, the Law Enforcement Conduct Commission and the Crime Commission, oversees the functions of the Information Commissioner and Privacy Commissioner and reports to Parliament.

Employees are required to undertake their role at the IPC in an independent, apolitical manner and consistent with relevant legislation. Employees must provide the same high standard of advice, assistance and service, irrespective of the political affiliation of the government.

Policies, guidelines and legislation must be applied equitably, transparently, on the basis of merit, and with proper consideration being given to the particular circumstances of each individual case.

Refrain from public comment on the work of the IPC

Public comment includes public speaking engagements, comments in the media, social media or publications where it is expected that the comments will spread to the community at large.

Employees, as individual members of the community, have the right to make public comment and enter into public debate on political and social issues. However, there are some circumstances in which this is inappropriate, for example, situations where the public comment, although made in a private capacity, may appear to be an official comment on behalf of the IPC. In such circumstances, employees should preface their remarks with a comment that they are made in a private or union official capacity and do not represent the official view of the public agency concerned.

Employees must not, in a work capacity, make public comment without authorisation on matters related to the IPC.

All media enquiries should be directed to the IPC's Manager, Communications and Corporate Affairs. Employees must comply with the IPC Media Procedures and any other relevant policy when given permission to make public comment on behalf of the IPC.

Employees may make public comment and enter into public debate on issues of interest in a private capacity, but generally only if this can be done without compromising the impartiality of the IPC. In some situations, the need to avoid compromising the impartiality of the IPC may require employees to refrain from making any public comment at all. This also applied to employees making comments or liking posts on professional social media platforms e.g. LinkedIn.

Comments made on matters pertaining to union business by members of unions in their capacity as a local delegate within the organisation, or by union office holders employed by the organisation, are permissible under this Code.

Participation as a volunteer

Within the context of this Code, employees are free to fully participate as volunteers in community organisations and charities, and in professional associations.

Employees are also legally entitled to be members of unions and industrial associations, and to participate in the activities of their union as members or delegates. Such membership and activities are not in conflict with the employee's work for the IPC.

Volunteer work must not involve any real or perceived conflict of interest with the employee's work for the IPC or involve the use of any IPC resources.

An exception to this is trade union delegates in regard to Clause 58 of the Crown Employees (Public Service Conditions of Employment) Reviewed Award 2009, where the IPC is to provide accredited delegates with reasonable access to the following facilities for authorised Association activities:

- (a) telephone, facsimile and, where available, email facilities
- (b) a notice board for material authorised by the association or access to staff notice boards for material authorised by the association
- (c) workplace conference or meeting facilities, where available, for meetings with member(s), as negotiated between local management and the Association.

Participation in political activities

If participating in any political activity, employees must:

- ensure that the involvement does not conflict, or cannot reasonably be perceived to conflict, with the primary duty to act in an independent, apolitical manner
- ensure that employees' views or actions are not presented as an official comment but rather as individual views or those of the political organisation represented
- not make use of any public office or resources for political activity
- immediately inform management of a potential or actual conflict of interest. If this occurs employees may have to stop the political activity or the IPC may choose to withdraw the employee from the areas of work where the conflict is occurring.

Special arrangements apply to employees who are contesting state or federal elections. These are detailed in sections 71 and 72 of the GSE Act.

3. Provide timely, accurate and impartial service which reflects our values

Employees are expected to provide assistance, advice and reports in a timely and impartial manner as part of their work. Such assistance and advice must be honest, frank, accurate and without material omission, and make clear any limitations. Consistent with IPC Values, employees are expected to adopt a service focused approach that recognises what clients/colleagues want and need, being transparent, communicative and articulate when delivering outcomes, and putting others first.

Employees are expected undertake their functions in a timely and impartial manner consistent with Commissioner responsibilities to uphold their legislation.

Similarly, the exercise of corporate functions (such as financial operations, communications, recruitment or purchasing) must also be performed in a timely, ethical and impartial way consistent with the IPC's Values and this Code.

Before providing advice or reports, employees should, where reasonably possible, make adequate inquiries to obtain all relevant information. If information provided is found to be false or misleading, it must be rectified as quickly as possible and appropriately documented.

In discharging these functions all employees are required to act within their authority and delegations and in accordance with any established procedures. They are expected to perform their duties to the best of their abilities. Where an employee has any concern about their ability to carry out their duties appropriately, or where they perceive an ethical dilemma, they should consult with their supervisor or another more senior manager.

4. Treat everyone with respect, courtesy and fairness

Employees must treat everyone with respect and courtesy. This includes refraining from discriminating, harassing, or bullying behaviour or treating anyone inappropriately, including colleagues, staff or members of the public.

Employees must not discriminate against a person because of race, ethnic or national origin, sex, including breastfeeding, age, marital status, pregnancy, disability, transgender grounds, sexuality, political or religious beliefs or responsibilities as a carer. Such discrimination may be unlawful.

All employees should be familiar with and comply with the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW) and the relevant Commonwealth anti-discrimination legislation.

5. Provide quality customer service and assistance

Employees must provide quality services and advice to the community and government and ensure fairness.

This entails:

- acting efficiently, equitably and professionally
- treating individuals courteously, attentively and sensitively
- making decisions based on merit and within the authority conferred.
- Where possible employees should:
 - inform customers of the procedures to be followed and their rights and obligations
 - consider a customer's views before making a decision
 - advise of the reasons for the decision.

Employees must meet their legal obligations and provide accurate information, within the scope of their position.

All employees should be familiar with and comply with the IPC Service Charter.

To ensure quality customer service and assistance is given, it is essential that employees:

- while on duty, not consume alcohol to excess or be under the influence of alcohol to a degree that adversely affects their capacity to work, not abuse prescription drugs and not use any form of illicit drugs or substances
- not use offensive or obscene language
- wear attire which reasonably reflects public expectations and community standards for each work location.

6. Respect the privacy of individuals and maintain appropriate confidentiality of information

Employees, or former employees, must not use confidential information obtained in official duties or by virtue of office or position to gain any direct or indirect financial benefit or other improper advantage for them, or any other person. Use of such information may be a criminal offence.

Maintain the confidentiality of government information

As a general rule, employees can disclose official information that is normally given to members of the public seeking that information. Disclosure of other official information or documents is allowed:

- in the course of duties and when proper authority has been given to do so
- when required to do so by law, or when authorised to do so by law
- when required to give evidence before a court or other body, keeping in mind that some information or documents may be protected from disclosure (e.g. Cabinet documents or documents where privilege is claimed).

Employees must not access, disclose, discuss or use any confidential information without official approval and must ensure that unauthorised people cannot access confidential information in any form.

If employees are unsure about disclosing any information, they should seek the advice of their immediate supervisor prior to releasing the information to the customer or other employee.

Leaving the public sector

When leaving the public sector, employees must return all documentation and any equipment provided or obtained. During subsequent employment and activities, employees must respect the confidentiality of information gained in their official capacity. Intellectual property remains the property of the government unless there is agreement in writing to the contrary.

Uphold the information access rights of citizens

The Government Information \(Public Access\) Act 2009 (GIPA Act) establishes a proactive, more open approach to gaining access to government information in New South Wales (NSW). The objects of the GIPA Act are to maintain and advance a system of responsible and representative democratic Government that is open, accountable, fair and effective.

The guiding principle of the GIPA Act is public interest. The IPC will disclose or release information unless there is an overriding public interest against doing so. This includes the proactive release of government held information about the IPC's structure, functions and policies, with Agency Information Guides (AIGs) playing an important role in promoting access to information, supporting participation and contributing to Open Government.

The GIPA Act also creates five offences (section 116-120) which, serve as an enforcement function to impose penalties upon persons committing the most serious contraventions of the GIPA Act, as well as a persuasive/educative function to deter persons from committing contraventions of the GIPA Act.

The IPC has issued guidance, Fact Sheet – Offences under the GIPA Act, to assist agencies and members of the public and in promoting awareness and understanding.

Respect the privacy of individuals

It is important that the community has confidence that personal information acquired and/or held by the IPC will be kept confidential as required under the law. Employees must ensure that personal information must only be used for the official purposes for which it was collected.

The Privacy and Personal Information Protection Act 1998 (PIIP Act) and Health Records and Information Privacy Act 2002 (HRIP Act) provide protections around information collected and/or held by a public agency about a person. This includes the collection, storage, use, access, correction and disclosure of personal information.

Both Acts require that the IPC must not do anything that contravenes the information protection principles or health privacy principles that apply to the IPC.

Employees must be aware of, and comply with, the requirements of the PIIP Act, the HRIP Act, and the IPC's Privacy Management Plan.

7. Act with honesty, ethically and with integrity

Employees must carry out work in an honest and transparent manner.

To ensure that honesty and integrity is not questioned, it is an employee's responsibility to:

- recognise and disclose any actual, potential, or perceived conflict of interest to their manager or another appropriate more senior officer
- take appropriate steps to resolve the conflict of interest in accordance with policy prior to engaging in the affected work
- not knowingly make decisions that may obtain, or may appear to obtain, a personal benefit or a benefit for family members, relatives, close friends, business partners or associates, unless it is a benefit received in common with a class of people who would ordinarily receive the benefit.
- All managers are additionally responsible for facilitating compliance by those they supervise by:
 - being aware of the risks of conflicts inherent in the work of the employees they manage
 - advising employees on appropriate ways to manage a conflict of interest
 - recording the receipt of disclosures of conflicts of interest as reported to them by employees, using the format at Attachment 1. This is to be kept confidential in a secure place by the Manager, Systems and Corporate Services for future reference if necessary. A copy should be provided to the employee who made the disclosure.

8. Identify and actively manage conflicts of interest

All employees must seek to identify and actively manage any conflict of interest in connection with their employment. The ICAC has comprehensive resources to assist and these should be considered if unsure how to handle a particular situation. IPC staff are encouraged to consider and apply ICAC guidance in identifying and managing potential and actual conflicts of interest within the IPC.

Employees and their work must not be influenced by plans for, or offers of, employment outside of the IPC. To do so creates a conflict of interest and puts the integrity of the IPC at risk.

Employees need to exercise care in dealing with former employees of the IPC to ensure there are no appearances of favourable treatment or inappropriate access to information.

Identify, manage and disclose any real or perceived conflict of interest

Sometimes, by virtue of official position or duties, employees may have the power to make decisions or act in ways that can further their own private interests. Employees must not allow the pursuit of private interests to interfere with the proper and impartial discharge of official duties. Potential conflicts of interest must be immediately disclosed to a manager or another appropriate more senior officer.

Private interests include not only personal interests, but also those of an employee's immediate family, relatives, business partners, associates or friends.

The ultimate decision concerning the appropriate course of action to take over a real, perceived or potential conflict of interest rests with the relevant manager or another appropriate more senior officer. If a conflict of interest arises employees are required to complete the Conflict of Interest Form shown as Attachment 1 of this Policy and discuss the action plan to manage the conflict with their manager or another appropriate more senior officer.

Disclose any secondary employment

Employees must comply with legal and policy requirements regarding secondary employment and must obtain approval before engaging in secondary employment.

In general, employees must not undertake secondary employment that adversely affects the performance of official duties or gives rise to a real, potential or reasonably perceived conflict of interest. More detailed information is available on the DCS Intranet.

The DCS Secondary Employment Policy requires a new declaration to be submitted for approval each year. Employees may also need to reapply if there is a change in their employment circumstances. Employees should also refer to the Government Sector Employment Regulation (NSW) 2014 Clause 7 for further information.

9. Decline gifts or benefits which affect or may be seen to affect impartiality

The IPC is committed to being a professional and ethical workplace. This can only be achieved and maintained if the community is confident that staff are not influenced by gifts and benefits. For staff there may be real and perceived risks associated with being offered or accepting gifts or benefits while on duty.

Employees must not seek, accept, or expect to receive any payment, gift or benefit from any person in an official capacity. Gifts or benefits may be intended or likely to influence, or could be reasonably perceived as being intended or likely to influence the employee. The IPC's Gifts and Benefits Policy provides guidance to staff on which gifts may be accepted, completion of the Gift or Benefit Notification Form and the publication of the IPC's Gifts Register for any gift accepted with a value greater than $100.

All reasonable steps should be taken by employees to ensure that immediate family members are not the recipients of gifts or benefits that could give the appearance to an impartial observer of an indirect attempt to secure influence or favour.

It is often not a question of whether a gift or benefit is or was an attempt to influence, but what an impartial observer would think. Factors which could influence the perception of a gift or benefit would include:

- the nature of the IPC's and employee's main functions

- the scale, lavishness or expense/cost/value of the gift
- the current or potential relationship between employees and the giver, including the likelihood of further contact
- whether gifts are being exchanged formally with another government agency or delegation
- the frequency of occurrence, regardless of the value
- the degree of openness surrounding the occasion or gift.

To preserve integrity when dealing with the public:

- employees should not accept a payment or benefit from any person dealt with in an official capacity
- employees should not display favour or bias toward or against any person in the course of official duty, even if there is no payment or return favour
- the appearance of impartiality should be respected and maintained, as well as impartiality in fact.

10. Report instances of corruption, serious and substantial waste, or maladministration

All staff members have an obligation to report any suspected corrupt or unlawful conduct, maladministration, serious and substantial waste of public resources, government information contravention or privacy contravention. The Public Interest Disclosures Act 2022 provides certain protections for employees who voluntarily report such matters. Employees should refer to the IPC's Public Interest Disclosures Internal Reporting Policy for further information.

11. Ensure public resources are used in a proper manner

Employees must be honest and open to scrutiny when managing public funds and assets.

Employees are expected to be efficient and economical in the use and management of public resources, including their own work time. Employees must be scrupulous in the use of public property and services and ensure that they are used for their intended purpose. Any loss, damage, misuse or theft should be reported to the employee's supervisor or the appropriate manager.

Any facilities provided by the IPC for use in performing duties or functions (such as transport, stationery, telephones or secretarial services) should be used strictly for those duties or functions. Occasional or minor use of IPC resources such as telephones, mobile phones, faxes, photocopiers and desktop computers for personal purposes is acceptable as long as it does not interfere with the IPC's work, customer service or the work of colleagues. Use of facilities by union delegates, in accordance with the provisions of Clause 58 of the Crown Employees (Public Service Conditions of Employment) Award 2009, is also appropriate. See also Section 2 of this Code.

Such use by employees should be infrequent and brief, and should not involve activities that might be questionable, controversial or offensive. This includes gambling, accessing chat lines, transmitting inappropriate jokes, intentionally downloading unauthorised software or accessing or communicating any material of an offensive, obscene, pornographic, threatening, abusive or defamatory nature. Such use is unacceptable and in most cases is likely to constitute a disciplinary offence.

All employees are required to abide by DCS's information security policies and procedures.

12. Exercise diligence, care and attention in performing official duties (such as procurement, decision making and dealing with lobbyists) and look for ways to improve performance

Employees must give appropriate time and attention to official business, endeavour to carry out their work efficiently, economically and effectively and in a manner such that the standard of work reflects favourably on the IPC. This means paying due care, attention and diligence to duties, fulfilling them, and reasonably supporting other employees in their endeavours to do the same.

Employees should keep up to date with advances and changes in areas of expertise, and look for ways to improve performance and achieve high standards of public administration.

This will be enhanced by employees sharing ideas and communicating effectively with each other.

13. Guide to ethical decision-making

Employees should ask themselves the following questions when making decisions:

- Is the decision or conduct legal and consistent with legislative requirements or relevant government and IPC policies?
- Is the decision or conduct consistent with the IPC's Values and this Code of Conduct?
- Can the decision or conduct be justified in terms of the public interest and would it withstand independent scrutiny?
- How would I perceive the situation if I were an independent public observer?
- Do the outcomes raise a conflict of interest or lead to private gain at public expense?
- Do the outcomes raise a perception of a conflict of interest or a perception of potential private gain at public expense?
- Will it discredit or disadvantage the IPC, customers or colleagues?

Further information and guidance in managing ethical dilemmas is available from the Public Service Commission employment portal on ethics and conduct.

14. Lobbying

Employees are required to abide by the NSW Lobbyist Code of Conduct which outlines that employees must not permit lobbying by a professional lobbyist unless the lobbyist is listed on the Register of Third-party Lobbyists and has disclosed certain information in their initial contact with the government representative. Employees should not meet or discuss work with a person listed on the NSW Register of Third Party Lobbyists without approval of the CEO.

A lobbyist for the purpose of this Code means a person, body corporate, unincorporated association, partnership or firm whose business includes being contracted or engaged to represent the interests of a third party to a government representative.

“Lobbyist” does not include:

- (a) an association or organisation constituted to represent the interests of its members
- (b) a religious or charitable organisation
- (c) an entity or person whose business is a recognised technical or professional occupation which, as part of the services provided to third parties in the course of that occupation, represents the views of the third party who has engaged it to provide their technical or professional services.

15. Breaches & Disciplinary Process

Breaches of this Code should be reported in writing to the relevant Director or the Director Business Improvement. The Director Business Improvement will investigate and manage any reports in accordance with sections 68-70 of the GSE Act. Further guidance is available on the Public Service Commission employment portal.

If the report is considered a Public Interest Disclosure (refer to section 10) this should be reported to the Disclosures Coordinator and will be investigated and managed under the provisions of IPC's Public Interest Disclosures Internal Reporting Policy.

All employees are required to comply with this Code and any breach of the Code may lead to remedial or disciplinary action including to:

- terminate your employment without giving you an opportunity to resign
- terminate your employment after giving you an opportunity to resign
- impose a fine on you which may be deducted from your salary
- reduce your salary
- reduce your classification or grade
- assign you to a different role
- caution or reprimand you.

16. References

The following policies are relevant to the IPC Code of Conduct. This list is indicative only and should not be considered to be an exhaustive list. Please refer to any other relevant legislation, policy or guidelines of the IPC.

- IPC Media Procedures
- DCS Conflicts of Interest Policy
- IPC Privacy Management Plan
- IPC Public Interest Disclosures Internal Reporting Policy
- IPC Gifts and Benefits Policy and Register
- Lobbyist Code of Conduct
- Public Service Commission Code of Ethics and Conduct for Government Sector Employees
- Public Service Commission employment portal

Acts cited:

- Government Sector Employment Act \(NSW\) 2013
- State Records Act \(NSW\) 1998
- Privacy and Personal Information Protection Act \(NSW\) 1998
- Health Records and Information Privacy Act \(NSW\) 2002
- Government Information \(Public Access\) Act 2009
- Public Interest Disclosures Act \(NSW\) 2022
- Anti-Discrimination Act 1977

Reference material is also available from the Independent Commission Against Corruption – see www.icac.nsw.gov.au.

DCS's Employee Assistance Program is a free, confidential counselling service for employees and their family members to help them resolve problems in their personal or working life. Telephone services are available at all times and face-to-face counselling is available on weekdays.

The Manager's Helpline offers a range of services and advice to managers requiring assistance for all staff related issues and supervision of staff. For confidential coaching and support call 1300 360 364 or download the Benestar app. Employee assistance services are available to all IPC staff and their immediate family.

Document information

Identifier/Title:	IPC Code of Conduct
Business Unit:	IPC
Author:	Director, Business Improvement
Approver:	Chief Executive Officer
Date of Effect:	October 2023
Next Review Date:	October 2025
EDRMS File Reference:	D20/022267/DJ
Key Words:	Code of Conduct, law, government policy, confidentiality, public comment, political activities, volunteer, advice, respect, courtesy, discrimination, harassment, bullying, inappropriate conduct, quality customer service, quality advice, privacy, honesty, integrity, conflict of duties, conflict of interest, disclosure, gifts and benefits, gifts and benefits register, confidentiality, leaving the public sector, leadership, responsibilities, corruption, waste, maladministration, public resources, diligence, care, attention, performance

Attachment 1: Disclosure of conflicts of interest

Date	Name of person disclosing potential conflict of interest	Outline of potential conflict	Advice provided to employee by manager, e.g. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • no adverse impact likely • cease action causing conflict • action plan to manage potential conflict

Attachment 2: IPC Code of Conduct Agreement*

I have read and understood IPC's Code of Conduct and will comply with it at all times while working at the IPC.

Signature

Name

Date

*An audit of record of all staff signatures of the Code will be kept.