This is a report of the Privacy Commissioner’s investigation into privacy matters related to NSW Roads and Maritime Services (RMS) release of photographs or photographic images to the NSW Police Force (NSWPF) in circumstances where the protocol, approved by the Privacy Commissioner and agreed between the two agencies setting out the limits and controls on release, had expired.

Executive summary

1. RMS collects and stores driver licence photographs for road transport purposes and is prohibited from releasing those photographs except in certain prescribed circumstances. Section 57 of the Road Transport Act 2013 authorises RMS to release photographs or photographic images to the NSWPF. However, RMS must ensure that the authorised release of photographs or photographic images to NSWPF is done in accordance with any protocol approved by the Privacy Commissioner.

2. A protocol was made by RMS and the NSWPF, and approved by the Privacy Commissioner, to meet the requirements of section 57 the Road Transport Act 2013. The protocol commenced on 1 April 2008, for a period of five years, and expired on 31 March 2013. The agencies continued to operate as though the 2008 Protocol had not expired.

3. On two separate occasions in 2013, follow up occurred with RMS to enquire as to the status of the expired protocol and the need to renew or replace these protocols.

4. Upon receipt of the correspondence, the Privacy Commissioner wrote to the RMS on 5 February 2014 seeking advice on the status of the protocol and if a new protocol was to be renewed or remade.

5. On 26 February 2014, RMS advised that it and NSW Police Force had agreed to a retrospective extension of the expired protocol until 31 December 2014.

6. The Privacy Commissioner received correspondence and subsequently advice from the Crown Solicitor that retrospective extension was not available and would have no legal effect. Consequently, the Privacy Commissioner met with RMS and advised that a retrospective extension was not available and a new protocol would be required and should occur as a matter of priority.

7. The Crown Solicitor also raised the possibility that disclosures of photographic images after expiry of the protocol may have constituted an infraction of the Privacy and Personal Information Protection Act 1998 (PPIP Act). Consequently, the Privacy Commissioner wrote to RMS and NSW Police Force seeking information to enable an investigation as to whether such a breach had occurred.

8. RMS expedited the renewal of the protocol, and the Privacy Commissioner approved it on 6 June 2014. The new protocol is in force until 5 June 2019. RMS advised that it is taking steps to strengthen its governance arrangements for the 2014 Protocol. The Privacy Commissioner was of the view that the photographs or photographic images released by RMS met the definition of personal information under the PPIP Act and that RMS is a public sector agency for the purposes of the PPIP Act. Accordingly, RMS was obliged to comply with the PPIP Act and the information protection principles when releasing photographs or photographic images to NSWPF at all times, in addition to the requirements of the Road Transport Act 2013. This obligation to comply with the PPIP Act exists regardless as to whether an approved protocol under the Road Transport Act was in force.
9. Specifically, the information protection principle on disclosure of personal information contained in section 18 of the PPIP Act and which provides that public sector agencies must not disclose personal information held unless:
   • it has a person’s consent or if the person was told at the time that it would be disclosed,
   • disclosure is directly related to the purpose for which the information was collected and there is no reason to believe the person would object, or the person has been made aware that information of that kind is usually disclosed, or
   • disclosure is necessary to prevent a serious and imminent threat to any person’s health or safety.

10. In this matter, RMS could call upon the exemption that a public sector agency is not required to comply with section 18 of the PPIP Act if the disclosure of the information is for a law enforcement purpose. This exemption is contained in section 23 of the PPIP Act. Relevantly, section 4 of both the 2008 Protocol (expired) and the 2014 Protocol, provides that RMS releases photographs and photographic images to the NSWPF for the purposes of the NSWPF investigating major crimes. Accordingly, RMS relies upon the exemption for a law enforcement purpose.

11. The intent of the approved protocol requirements under the Road Transport Act appears to be the establishment of parameters for release so as to minimise unnecessary intrusions on the privacy of RMS customers. The approved protocols extend to both RMS and NSWPF a framework within which the authorised release of photographs or photographic images can occur, with appropriate limits and controls on the release process to ensure compliance with relevant laws, including the PPIP Act.

12. While there was a clear and significant failure by RMS to ensure that a protocol was in force as a sound privacy governance, no breach of the information protection principles appears to have resulted by way of RMS releasing personal information during the period between its expiry (April 2013) and renewal (June 2014), due to the exemption under section 23 of the PPIP Act.

13. In finalising the investigation, the Privacy Commissioner welcomed the RMS commitment to implement more rigorous governance and better communication to ensure that the 2014 Protocol and subsequent renewals are managed efficiently and effectively:
   • considering governance arrangements for all inter-government MOUs within cluster arrangements
   • establishing regular relationship meetings with NSW Police Force
   • inclusion of the protocol in audit and risk processes.

14. The Privacy Commissioner’s recommendations recognise the RMS commitment in this regard and focus on ensuring stronger privacy governance through integration in audit and risk arrangements, consultation with Transport for NSW to improve oversight, continuing to work with NSWPF to improve communication and management, and commencing a review and renewal process in January 2019.

15. The Privacy Commissioner’s investigation concluded that while there was a significant lapse in sound privacy governance, there appeared to be no breach by the RMS of the information protection principles under the PPIP Act.

16. A response from RMS to the draft report was received by the Privacy Commissioner on 3 August 2015.

17. The Privacy Commissioner thanks RMS and NSW Police Force for their assistance during the course of this investigation.

Investigation

18. The Privacy Commissioner, in accordance with her function under section 36(2)(l) of the PPIP Act, initiated an investigation into the privacy matters related to the release of photographic images by RMS to the NSWPF in the absence of an approved protocol under the Road Transport Act.

19. This investigation concerns the RMS as the agency responsible for releasing the photographic images; however, as NSWPF was a party to the 2008 Protocol (expired), the Privacy Commissioner requested it to provide information to assist the investigation.

20. The investigation was conducted in accordance with section 39 of the PPIP Act, which provides that the Privacy Commissioner may determine the procedures to be followed in exercising her functions under the PIPP Act.

21. On 14 April 2014, the Privacy Commissioner wrote to RMS and to the NSWPF advising of the investigation and requesting information to understand whether and to what extent any breach of information privacy principles under the PPIP Act may have occurred. The information privacy principles are at Appendix A.

22. On 28 April 2014, RMS provided an initial response, followed by provision of a more detailed response on 12 May 2014.

23. On 27 May 2014, NSWPF wrote to the Privacy Commissioner with information detailing its access to photographic images released by RMS.

24. The Privacy Commissioner considered the information provided by RMS and NSWPF to make the findings and conclusions set out in this report.
25. On 17 June 2015, a draft of the report was provided to RMS for their consideration and response. A response to the report was received on 3 August 2015 from RMS. The Privacy Commissioner has considered the response from RMS and this has been incorporated into the final report.

26. This report is made as a public statement of the Privacy Commissioner in accordance with section 36(2)(h) of the PPIP Act.

Application of the PPIP Act – public sector agency, personal information and disclosure

27. RMS is a public sector agency within the definition of section 3 of the PPIP Act.

28. Section 4 of the PPIP Act defines personal information to mean “information or an opinion (including information or an opinion forming part of a database and whether or not recorded in a material form) about an individual whose identity it apparent or can reasonably be ascertained from the information or opinion.

29. The information that is contained within the image includes the photographic image of the individual and the identity of the individual. The photographic image is the personal information of the individual whose identity is apparent or can reasonably be ascertained from the information or opinion.

30. Section 18 of the PPIP Act provides limitations on disclosure of personal information. Specifically, it provides:

(1) A public sector agency that holds personal information must not disclose the information to a person (other than the individual to whom the information relates) or other body, whether or not such other person or body is a public sector agency, unless:

(a) the disclosure is directly related to the purpose for which the information was collected, and the agency disclosing the information has no reason to believe that the individual concerned would object to the disclosure, or

(b) the individual concerned is reasonably likely to have been aware, or has been aware in accordance with section 10, that information of that kind is usually disclosed to that other person or body, or

(c) the agency believes on reasonable grounds that the disclosure is necessary to prevent or lessen a serious and imminent threat to the life or health of the individual concerned or another person.

(2) If personal information is disclosed in accordance with subsection (1) to a person or a body that is a public sector agency, that agency must not disclose the information for a purpose other than the person for which the information was given to it.

31. RMS is a public sector agency that holds personal information in the form of photographs and photographic images. The RMS disclosed that personal information to NSWPF. As there is no evidence to suggest that the disclosure was in circumstances contemplated by section 18, it may be in breach of the information protection principle unless a relevant exemption under the PPIP Act applies.

Application of the PPIP Act – exemptions

32. Section 27 of the PPIP Act provides NSWPF with an exemption from complying with the information protection principles, except in connection with the exercise of its administrative and educative function. This exemption is specific to the NSWPF and does not extend to include the RMS.

33. RMS seeks to rely upon the exemption available at section 23 of the PPIP Act. Section 23 (5) of the PPIP Act provides as follows:

Exemptions relating to law enforcement and related matters

(5) A public sector agency (whether or not a law enforcement agency) is not required to comply with section 18 if the disclosure of the information concerned:

(a) is made in connection with proceedings for an offence or for law enforcement purposes (including the exercising of functions under or in connection with the Confiscation of Proceeds of Crime Act 1989 or the Criminal Assets Recovery Act 1990), or

(b) is to a law enforcement agency (or for such other purpose or organisation as may be prescribed by the regulations) for the purposes of ascertaining the whereabouts of an individual who has been reported to a police officer as a missing person, or

1 The Administrative Decisions Tribunal held that photographs of a person are personal information as defined in s4 of the PPIP Act SW v NSW Forests [2006] NSWADT 74, at 31.
34. Section 23(5) applies to any public sector agency regardless of whether they are a law enforcement agency, including RMS.

35. The 2008 Protocol (expired) described the purposes to which access to the DRIVES database was to be provided.

36. One purpose was the investigation of a missing person, for which section 23 (5)(b) provides a specific exemption. In this regard any disclosure of photographs or photographic images to NSWPF by RMS that related to the investigation of a missing person would appear to be exempt under section 23(5)(b) of the PPIP Act, and not a breach of the section 18 disclosure information protection principle.

37. A second purpose was the investigation of major crime. In considering whether investigating major crime is a law enforcement purpose within the meaning of section 23(5)(a), guidance is available in the decision of GA v Department of Education and Training and NSW Police (No 3) [2005] NSWADT 70.

38. In that matter, the Tribunal adopted the definition of “law enforcement” as determined by the Tribunal in JD v Director General, NSW Department of Health (No. 2) [2004] NSWADT 227 at paragraph 79, which said:

“In my opinion, the term “law enforcement” should be given its ordinary meaning and it should not be narrowly construed...”

39. The Tribunal noted at paragraph 73 of the decision in GA, that the test in section 23(5)(a) is directed for the purpose of the disclosure, “The statutory test is not directed to the quality or relevance of the information”. Application of the test is a question of fact.

40. The purpose for the disclosure by RMS to NSWPF is clear from the purpose of the 2008 Protocol (expired); to assist with police investigations into major crime. Accordingly, disclosures made for this purpose of law enforcement may be sufficient to attract the section 23(5)(a) exemption to the disclosure of photographs or photographic images to NSWPF by RMS under the 2008 Protocol when it was in force and following its expiry.

41. The protocol for the release of photographs and photographic images by RMS to NSWPF is a requirement of section 57 of the Road Transport Act. Section 57 provides that RMS must ensure that a photograph to which the section applies and any photographic image or other matter contained in any database of such photographs is not released except to, amongst others, the NSWPF and that any authorised release must be in accordance with any protocol approved by the Privacy Commissioner.

42. The protocol operates in concert with the PPIP Act to provide an authorising environment.

43. Section 23(5) of the PPIP Act permits the disclosure of “personal information” about an individual for “law enforcement purposes” or for “the purposes of ascertaining the whereabouts of an individual who has been reported to a police officer as a missing person”.

44. A protocol in accordance with section 57 of the Road Transport Act was in place between the RMS and NSWPF, and approved by the Privacy Commissioner, from 1 April 2008 until 31 March 2013, at which time the protocol expired.

45. RMS and NSWPF continued to operate as though the 2008 Protocol had not expired, with RMS providing photographic images to NSWPF from its DRIVES database.

46. NSWPF accesses the images from RMS for the purposes of investigating major crimes. Under the 2008 Protocol (expired), investigation “means an investigation of a major crime, or an investigation for the purposes of ascertaining the whereabouts of an individual who has been reported to a police officer as a missing person and referred to the Missing Persons Unit within the OIA”.

47. Major crime is then defined at paragraph 1(f) as:

The commission or attempted commission of any one or more of the following offences:

(i) homicide;
(ii) child abuse;
(iii) extortion;
(iv) kidnapping/abduction;
(v) bombings;
(vi) money laundering;
(vii) arson;
(viii) terrorist offences;
(ix) serious violent crime;
(x) drug trafficking;
(xi) complex fraud;
(xii) serial armed fraud;
(xiii) any other crime or incident which, due to its organisation or other special circumstances, is designated as a “major crime” by the Commissioner or the Commissioner’s delegated officer.

48. RMS expedited the renewal of the protocol, and the Privacy Commissioner approved it on 6 June 2014. The new protocol is in force until 5 June 2019.

Releases following the expiry of the 2008 Protocol

49. RMS advised the Privacy Commissioner, in correspondence dated 12 May 2014, that subsequent to the expiry of the protocol a total of 3,282 images were released to NSW Police Force in the period 1 April 2013 and 31 March 2014.

50. NSWPF advised the Privacy Commissioner, in correspondence dated 27 May 2014, that 3,568 images were accessed.

51. A review of the advice provided identified that the difference in the data reported by RMS and NSWPF arises due to the agencies using different time periods for the data captures. In the case of NSWPF, the data related to a longer period of time, being up to 27 May 2014. In this context it would be reasonable to expect that the numbers reported by NSWPF would be higher.

52. On 17 April 2014, NSWPF suspended access to the images other than in an emergency and only subject to approval from the Commander of the Operational Information Agency, pending the making of a new protocol.

Complaints about releases in the absence of a Protocol

53. RMS advised that no complaints were received by it relating to the release of photographs or photographic images to NSWPF during the period following the expiry of the 2008 Protocol.

54. RMS proposed that should complaints be received, they will be dealt with in accordance with usual RMS complaint procedures. RMS proposed also that a complaint provision would be included in the new protocol to replace the 2008 Protocol. Section 10 of the 2014 Protocol contains privacy complaint provisions.

55. RMS has not and does not intend to inform customers whose images have been released, that release occurred in the absence of a protocol. RMS was of the view that a privacy breach had not occurred and that notification to customers may in fact prejudice police investigations concerning major crimes. RMS was also of the view that because RMS operated from 1 April 2013 according to the process in place in the protocol, customers were afforded the same privacy safeguards as though the protocol was actually in force.

Audit of compliance with the Protocol

56. As required by the 2008 Protocol, NSWPF is responsible for conducting audits for compliance with the protocol.

57. RMS did not undertake any specific audits, inquiries or review of compliance with the 2008 Protocol. RMS indicated that subsequent to the receipt of the NSWPF audit reports, RMS considers action in response to any identified non-compliance with the protocol.

58. It is noted that although section 8 of the expired protocol required that within one month of conducting the audits, the results of the audit were to be communicated in writing to the Privacy Commissioner, this had not occurred in recent years. This represents a failure in fulfilling the responsibilities committed to by the RMS and NSWPF in the making of the protocol.

59. The 2014 Protocol contains similar audit provisions in which it is expected that the RMS (and NSWPF) will ensure safeguards are in place to ensure compliance with the audit requirements during the life of the protocol.

Governance of the Protocol

60. RMS identified that the governance of inter-agency arrangements presented challenges for both large and small organisations. In particular for RMS, the management of the renewal of the 2008 Protocol was affected by significant Transport for NSW and RMS corporate restructures.

While it is accepted that significant corporate restructures can present challenges for an organisation, this case highlights the importance of ensuring that organisational change management plans detail how system and procedures designed to protect personal information will be maintained through periods of transition.
Conclusion

61. Although section 57 of the Road Transport Act requires the authorised release of photographs and photographic images to the NSWPF to be in accordance with any protocol approved by the Privacy Commissioner, it does not provide the basis for the lawful disclosure of personal information under the PPIP Act. In other words, operation of the PPIP Act is not conditional upon the existence of the protocol or subject to the operation of the Road Transport Act. Rather, the protocol acts to facilitate and provide a governance mechanism to establish parameters for release so as to minimise unnecessary intrusions on the privacy of RMS customers.

62. The failure to review and renew the 2008 Protocol prior to its expiry was a significant lapse in sound privacy governance, however there appears to be no breach by the RMS of the information protection principles under the PPIP Act given the PPIP Act’s separate and broader authorising provisions for the disclosure of personal information for law enforcement purposes.

Recommendations

63. This investigation highlighted areas where RMS can improve its privacy governance. A number of suggestions were made to RMS during the course of the investigation and received RMS commitment to implement better governance and communication arrangements to ensure that the 2014 Protocol and subsequent renewals are managed efficiently and effectively. The Privacy Commissioner recognises the RMS commitment and recommends that RMS:

   a. provide this report to its Audit and Risk Committee and any oversight committees of Transport for NSW (TfNSW);
   b. include the section 57 Road Transport Act requirements in the agency’s risk management arrangements;
   c. consult with Transport for NSW on establishing regular relationship meetings with NSWPF to provide oversight of agreements, including the 2014 Protocol;
   d. continue working with NSWPF to improve communication and management of the 2014 Protocol; and
   e. commence the review of the 2014 Protocol in January 2019 to ensure the Protocol is renewed by 6 June 2019.

64. In response to the draft report, RMS welcomes the Privacy Commissioner’s findings that a breach of the PPIP Act had not occurred however recognises that the unintentional lapsing of the Protocol by not having a mechanism or sufficient oversight in place represented a failure in privacy governance.

The response by RMS to the recommendations is summarised in the table below:

Background

A. Section 23(5) of the Privacy and Personal Information Protection Act 1998 permits the Roads and Maritime Services (“RMS”) RMS to disclose “personal information” about an individual for “law enforcement purposes” or “for the purposes of ascertaining the whereabouts of an individual who has been reported to a police officer as a missing person.”

B. However, Part 3.5 of the Road Transport Act 2013 imposes additional restrictions in relation to the release of driver licence photographs. 2.7 No later than 6 month before the 5th anniversary of the Commencement Date RMS, NSW Police Force and the Privacy Commissioner must commence discussions to review this Protocol.

3. Approval of Protocol

3.1 The Protocol is hereby approved by the Privacy Commissioner for the purpose of s. 57(2) of the Road Transport Act 2013 and s.19(2) of the Photo Card Act 2005 and clause 109(2) of the Road Transport (General) Regulation 2013.

4. Purpose for which release of photographs is permitted

5.1 All requests by the NSW Police Force for release of photographs must be made through officers deployed within the OIA and authorised by the Commissioner of Police, or the Commissioner’s Delegate for this purpose (“Requesting Officers”).
